Super To Sail For Home July 24th

Secretary Paul Super of the Y. M. C. A. will sail for Honolulu on the Lurline July 24, according to a letter received yesterday by A. E. Larimer, acting general secretary. In this letter which was written in Cleveland, Ohio, the general secretary gives a detailed account of his trip and outlined his future plans.

While in Cleveland, Super met Meyer Blumfield, the vocational guidance expert and in this connection he mentions that he is attempting to persuade Blumfield to come to Honolulu some time next year to lecture before the Social Survey.

From Cleveland, the general secretary intended to go to the Lake Geneva Conference which is in session from June 26 to July 10. He expects to attend the school of city administration work conducted by the leading metropolitan secretaries of the Y.

M. C. A. and will then leave for Chicago. Super will start for San Francisco in time to catch the Lurline on July 24 and will arrive here July 31.

PASTOR FELMY'S FLOCK TO BID HIM FAREWELL

Pastor W. Felmy of the German Lutheran church will be tendered a reception at K. of P. hall this evening by the Germans of the community who are taking this means of bidding farewell to their minister, who is leaving for Germany after many years of service in this city.

The program will include several musical numbers rendered by friends and by the choir.

A. C. Montgomery, steward of the Pacific Club, has acquired the lease of the Wallana hotel, formerly the Hau Tree, at Waikiki Beach, from J. A. Palmer of the Hotel Courtland. The lease runs for thirty months. Mr. Montgomery has cabled to the mainland for a chef, and will make the kitchen the feature of the new house.

RAISING THE WIND

By M. QUAD

At fifty years of age and after working hard for thirty of them Amos Schermerhorn found himself worth less than $100.

Mr. Schermerhorn had never spent much time thinking and planning of things outside his daily work. He was a carpenter, and that settled that. He could earn $2.50 per day when he did work, and that settled that. He never allowed himself to have dreams of riches and ease. Perhaps it was for this reason and because he was no talker and didn't mix up with politics that he came to be looked upon as a rather dull man.

On his fiftieth birthday the carpenter, being out of work, sauntered off into the woods and sat down to have his first real think. Hard work was already beginning to tell on him, and after about five years more what was to become of him? He was frightened at the thought. When he could no longer earn wages it must be the poorhouse for him, as he had no relatives to help him out. For three long hours Amos kept his brains at work, and as he walked back to the village people noticed a change in him. As Deacon Tucker afterward remarked:

"Why, he looked an altogether different man to me, and he talked right up as brisk as a lightning rod man. I couldn't help but wonder if he had found a dollar in the road."

Next day Amos Schermerhorn picked his clothes in a suitcase and headed for a village thirty miles away. He entered it on the second day. There had been two or three recent robberies, and the constables were on the alert. A mile from the village and directly in front of a farmer's barn Amos sat down to rest. The farmer saw him and came out and asked questions and finally ordered him to move on and helped him with a kick. He did more. He followed the wayfarer into the village and painted him out as a suspicious person and had him arrested. Amos made no kick and was arraigned, convicted and sent to jail for thirty days with great celerity. The constable slapped his mouth when he started to protest, the judge said he looked like an unwhipped villain, and the jailer slammed him into a cell with so much violence that he was thrown down and had a finger broken.

Amos Schermerhorn served his thirty days in jail and was then warned to leave town within half an hour. He made straight for the office of a lawyer friend, and before night there was something to be talked of. The farmer who had kicked him was arrested for assault and battery, the constable who had run him in was arrested for false imprisonment, the judge got a summons for defamation of character, and the jailer was arrested on the same charge as the farmer.

The judge had been a judge for fifteen years, and he had always thought it within his province to call a prisoner a son of a gun or any other old thing he happened to think of. He now learned that his legal duties ceased with pronouncing sentence. He had defamed the character of a good man, and he had to pay for it. Amos had $250 in his hand pocket when he moved on, and he hadn't put in an hour at hard work. He had another village in mind, and he headed for it. It was a farmer again that gave him away. He was plodding along the dusty road when arrested with:

"Here, you tramp, don't you want a few days' work?"

"How much a day?"

"Fifty cents and board."

"I can do better."

"Oh, you can? What all you is that you don't want work at any price. Your kind just want to tramp and beg. By John, there ought to be a jail big enough to hold you all!"

"I am not a tramp," mildly replied Amos.

"Oh, you are a gentleman, mebbe?"

"Well, I can pay my way."

"And the carpenter dug down and brought out his roll and held it up to view and walked off."

"Gosh," exclaimed the farmer to himself. "But he's a highway robber or I never saw one! Like enough he broke into a house last night. Well, I'll settle his hash mighty sudden!"

And he went into the house and telephoned the constable at the village that there was a suspicious character headed that way, and Amos was collared as soon as he showed up. He refused to give his name or to tell where he got the money found on him. The charge put against him was suspected robbery, and he was sent to jail and held for ten days in hopes his victim might be heard from. At the end of that time he was sentenced for ten days for being a vagabond.

When his sentence was up it was a call on a lawyer again. The defendants could prove nothing whatever against the plaintiff when it came to a showdown, while he could show that the three of them had acted illegally and that he had a fourth case against the farmer. Mr. Schermerhorn got $500 for his share and walked on to play the same game elsewhere. When he returned to his home Deacon Rider was the first man to shake hands with him and to say:

"Lordy, but how people can be deceived in a man! We never took you to be more than half baked, and here you have been upstitch three different states and gettin' ready to run for the presidency!"

The paving of Queen street, from its intersection with Nuuanu avenue and extending to the Waikiki bank of the river, will begin with Monday morning, when Joseph Gilman, of the Honolulu Bitulithic Pavement Company, will set a large force of men at work in excavating the thoroughfare, preparatory to the actual work of laying the broken rock.

The bitulithic company secured the contract to pave the much traveled thoroughfare for $26,000.

President Gilman promises to complete the job, and turn the street over to the city within forty days, barring accidents.

The pavement of Queen street is predicted will greatly facilitate the movement of much merchandise from the several wharves to local business houses.

It is estimated that a large percentage of the heavy traffic of Honolulu passes over this highway. For years past the Ewa section of the street has been in deplorable condition.

A meeting of Rapid Transit directors was held today, at which time it is understood the matter of paving between the tracks of the company was brought up for discussion. The street railway traverses Queen street the entire length of the thoroughfare now to be paved.

KING'S DAUGHTERS' LABOR IN CARING FOR AGED OF CITY

In the following report prepared by the Matron of the King's Daughters' home for the Aged at 1625 Makiki street, the work of the organization in caring for the old people of the community is touched upon together with the plans which the organization has for the future:

"Two years ago this August the Hawaiian Circle of the King's Daughters' (Honolulu, T. H.) opened a home on 1625 Makiki street for aged white men and women. Since then we have cared for ten such persons."

"Some of our old people have required the constant attention of a nurse—for nearly six months a young man was engaged as an attendant for a Veteran of the Civil War. This old soldier having come to us sick almost unto death. We rejoice that he has quite recovered from this illness. He is a true Celtic and spends much time and labor in his little garden which he loves. However we can not report such favorable progress for other patients who have required constant care both day and night for the past year."

"In February last two of our old people were called home. One after a painful illness of many weeks. The summons came to the other very suddenly dropping dead beside the grave of her friend."

"The Home has been fortunate in that it has had the opportunity of sheltering in nearly every instance people of refinement and a certain amount of culture. One a retired school teacher and composer of music. Among her activities she founded St. Mary school and gathered the first dollar toward founding St. Clement Church. Another a former editor of one of the local papers. Another was a governess in India. Another a missionary in China and Honolulu. One was an American consul. Another has a University degree."

"All holidays are observed in fitting manner at the home. At Halloween one of the old ladies got the ring in the cake and another the thimble. We are all children again on these occasions and as playful as kittens."

"Meal time is one of the most interesting occasions of the home. Each brings her own individuality into play. One old lady whose appetite is rather poor brings her knitting with her to the table. We chat in several languages, as several members of the household speak both French and German."
